

FURTHMAN SAYS HE'S POOR; WIFE SAYS HE'S RICH; JUDGE TO DECIDE

Misses $1,000 "Pin Money" and Wants $200 Alimony From Poor (?) Hubby.

Although admitting that for many years he allowed his wife $5,000 a year for her clothes and $1,000 for "pin money," Charles Furthman, Park Row cafe and restaurant keeper, complained to Supreme Court Justice Gerard to-day that he could not possibly pay her more than $30 a week alimony, pending the trial of a suit he has brought against her for divorce.

There was a long wrangle between Abraham Levy, counsel for Furthman, and James W. Osborn, attorney for Mrs. Furthman, after which Justice Gerard said he would take the matter under advisement and probably appoint a referee to determine the amount of Furthman's present income.

"Why," said Mr. Osborn, "it is simply ridiculous to say this man, who owns three cafes and restaurants, cannot pay his wife more than $30 a week alimony. He was not struck by poverty until this suit was brought, and I am prepared to show right now that instead of being financially embarrassed, he actually has an income of from $50,000 to $100,000 a year."

Mr. Osborn then asked the Court to sign an order directing Furthman to pay him a counsel fee of $7,000 to defend the suit for Mrs. Furthman, and besides grant her $200 weekly alimony.

"Absurd," broke in Mr. Levy. "The fact is, Furthman's income at present is only about $5,000 a year. Why, he would starve if he were compelled to pay his wife such a ridiculous amount of alimony, to say nothing of the modest counsel fee of $7,000 asked by his learned friend, Mr. Osborn."

"Well, then," said Mr. Osborn, "if his income is so small, will you please tell the Court, Mr. Levy, how it is Furthman was enabled to buy a summer home at Litchfield, Conn., for $100,000; how he manages to go abroad every year and take an automobile with him; how he visits Palm Beach, Fla., during the winter, maintains two motor boats there and pays $10 a day for his rooms? No, sir, I don't think you can explain that. Why, we will show the court that Furthman's automobile costs him $5,000 a year."

Mr. Osborn added that Furthman and his wife had lived happily and lovingly for the last eighteen years, and it was not until he questioned Emma Lehman, a pretty young girl Mrs. Furthman brought over from Germany with her some time ago, that he thought of this suit.

TIM HURST DYING OF PNEUMONIA AT LONG ISLAND HOME

Famous as Umpire and Referee, Report Says "Can Live Only Few Hours."

Tim Hurst, the baseball umpire and boxing referee, is reported to be dying to-day at his home at Bellport, L. I., from pneumonia.

He was stricken a month ago, but after two weeks' confinement was able to return to the city. His doctor ordered him back to Bellport. Several days ago he returned there, and yesterday suffered a relapse. Early to-day his physician reported he was sinking rapidly and it was doubtful if he survived many hours.

Tim Hurst was manager of the Madison Square Garden Athletic Club when he became ill. He is one of the official referees appointed by the State Athletic Commission. He has been prominently identified with athletics for years and has friends all over the country.

Dr. E. V. W. Schenk, the attending physician, said to-day he had been at Mr. Hurst's bedside all night and that the end might come at any moment. The relapse of the pneumonia is now complicated by dropsy.

BUTTER MAN ARRESTED

Grocer Says He Picked up Revenue Agent, Demanding Cash.

A man who says he is J. Robert McMillan, a butter salesman of Washington, D. C., was arrested to-day before United States Commissioner Gilchrist on the charge of having falsely represented himself to be an internal revenue agent so as to extort $1,500 from C. Tietjen, a grocer on No. 355 Spring street, Jersey City.

McMillan was arrested at the Hotel Brooklyn by Chief Agent John W. Sinsel of the Internal Revenue Service, and three of his agents, Meyer, Maguire and O'Hearn. In the complaint Agent Sinsel states that several days ago McMillan visited Tietjen's store and took samples of oleomargarine which he placed in fourteen sealed bottles. According to Sinsel, McMillan then told the grocer that he was sorry that he would have to make a complaint against him because the oleomargarine was not labeled as the law required. After some further conversation Sinsel says the prisoner told Tietjen that if he paid $1,500 he would make no complaint in the case. For the payment of the cash a meeting was arranged for at the Hotel Brooklyn and when Tietjen handed McMillan an envelope stuffed with tissue paper and three dollars in greenbacks, the man was arrested. McMillan was held in $2,000 for examination next Monday.

Thief Got Pictures Worth $50,000.
CHICAGO, May 28.—Five oil paintings of a total value of $50,000 have been stolen from the Prairie avenue home of Mrs. Charles P. Kellogg. The paintings were taken during Mrs. Kellogg's absence in Florida. The thief did not generally become known until last night. Descriptions of the paintings were mailed to every art centre in the world by a detective agency.
